

I · M · 8

INFLUENCER CONTENT PLAYBOOK

7 Go-To Concepts for Every Creator

Daily Ultimate Essentials

How to Use This Playbook

This document contains 7 proven content concepts. Each one is based on the angles that are currently converting best across our paid media. Pick whichever concept feels most natural to you and your audience. You can shoot one, or all seven.

Each concept includes hook examples, talking points, and a ready-to-read example script if you prefer to work from a full script rather than bullet points.

The Rules

- Be yourself. These are frameworks, not teleprompter scripts. Internalize the beats and say it the way you'd actually say it to a friend.
- If it sounds like an ad / scripted, start over. The content should feel like something your audience would watch even if it weren't sponsored.
- Film direct-to-camera, talking-head style. Natural lighting. Wherever you'd normally film.
- One clear product moment per video — sachet tear, pour, mix, or sip. Don't force it.

Standard CTA (end every video with this)

Use your own words but hit these beats:

- Your personal discount code: [YOUR CODE] in my bio
- 30-day money-back guarantee — if you don't feel a difference, send it back
- Free welcome kit with your first order

Key Product Facts

Product	IM8 Daily Ultimate Essentials
What It Is	90 clinically dosed ingredients in one scoop of powder. Mix with water.
What It Replaces	Up to 16 separate supplements
Price	Under $3 a day
Certification	NSF Certified for Sport — tested for 280+ banned substances
Clinical Trial	95% reported more energy

	85% reported better digestion 80% reported better sleep 75% reported sharper focus
Co-Founded By	David Beckham
Formulated By	World-leading scientists
Ambassadors	Giannis Antetokounmpo, Aryna Sabalenka, Oliver Bearman
Partnership	Official supplement partner of Inter Miami
Guarantee	30-day money-back, no questions asked

Do NOT Say

- Do NOT say “Mayo Clinic” or “NASA” by name — say “world-leading scientists” instead
- Do NOT say “ashwagandha” — it is no longer in the product
- Do NOT say “92 ingredients” — the correct number is 90
- Do NOT make medical claims (don’t say “it cures,” “it treats,” “it prevents”)

CONCEPT 1

The 90-in-1 Simplification

Angle: The sheer volume of what's inside one scoop makes every other supplement routine look absurd.

Hook Examples (use these or write your own in the same spirit)

1. "I used to take 12 different supplements every morning. Now I take one scoop of this. Let me show you why."
2. "90 research-backed ingredients in a single sachet. Buying each one separately would cost you hundreds a month. This is under $3 a day."
3. "If your supplement routine takes longer than making coffee, you're overcomplicating it. Here's what I switched to."
4. "I replaced my entire supplement cabinet with one scoop. And it actually works better."

Talking Points

Hit these beats in your own words. You don't need all of them — pick the ones that feel natural to you.

- You used to take multiple supplements — or you know you should but you never do because it's too complicated. Either way, the problem is the same: too many bottles, too much money, too much guessing.
- IM8 puts 90 clinically dosed ingredients in one scoop. Vitamins, minerals, probiotics, adaptogens, amino acids, digestive enzymes, superfoods, CoQ10, saffron — all of it.
- It replaces up to 16 separate supplements. One scoop, one minute, every morning.
- The ingredients are in bioactive forms your body actually absorbs — not the cheap versions most brands use.
- Co-founded by David Beckham. Used by Giannis Antetokounmpo, Aryna Sabalenka, and Oliver Bearman. Official supplement partner of Inter Miami.
- Under $3 a day. 30-day money-back guarantee.

Avoid

- Don't list all 90 ingredients — the point is that there's too many to list. That's the hook.
- Don't compare to specific competitor products by name.

Example Script (if you prefer to read)

You can read this as-is or use it as a starting point. Replace [YOUR CODE] with your discount code.

I used to have this whole drawer of supplements. Magnesium for sleep. A B-complex for energy. Probiotics for my gut. A separate vitamin D. Zinc. CoQ10 because someone told me to.

And honestly? Half the time I'd forget to take most of them.

Then I found IM8. And what got me was the label. Every single thing I was buying separately was already in there. 90 clinically dosed ingredients in one scoop. All in the bioactive forms your body actually absorbs — not the cheap synthetic versions most supplements use.

It replaces up to 16 separate supplements. One scoop in water every morning. Takes about a minute.

It's co-founded by David Beckham, used by Giannis and Aryna Sabalenka, and it's the official supplement partner of Inter Miami. Formulated by world-leading scientists. NSF Certified for Sport.

It's under $3 a day. And there's a 30-day money-back guarantee — so if you don't feel a difference, you get your money back. Code [YOUR CODE] in my bio.

CONCEPT 2

The 30-Day Timeline

Angle: Document what changed when you committed to one sachet every morning for 30 days.

Hook Examples (use these or write your own in the same spirit)

1. "Day 1 vs. Day 30. I documented exactly what changed when I committed to one sachet every morning."
2. "I tried IM8 for 30 days. Here's what I actually noticed — week by week."
3. "I gave this one month. Here's the honest timeline of what happened."
4. "I wasn't expecting to notice anything. By week two, I couldn't ignore it."

Talking Points

Hit these beats in your own words. You don't need all of them — pick the ones that feel natural to you.

- Walk through what you noticed and when. Be specific and honest. The more real, the better.
- Week 1: Most people notice energy and digestion first. Did you feel less bloated? Did your energy stabilize? Did you sleep differently?
- Week 2–3: Deeper changes. Did your focus sharpen? Did your mood even out? Did your skin look different? Did someone else notice before you did?
- Week 4: What's the cumulative feeling? What's the one thing you'd miss if you stopped?
- Mention the clinical trial results: 95% reported more energy, 85% better digestion, 80% better sleep, 75% sharper focus.
- This concept works best AFTER you've actually used the product for 30+ days. Authenticity is the entire point.

Avoid

- Don't fake a timeline. If you haven't used it for 30 days yet, shoot a different concept first and come back to this one.
- Don't make dramatic before/after transformation claims.

Example Script (if you prefer to read)

You can read this as-is or use it as a starting point. Replace [YOUR CODE] with your discount code.

I've been taking IM8 every morning for 30 days now and I want to walk you through what I actually noticed — because some of it surprised me.

First week, the biggest thing was digestion. I'd been bloated basically every afternoon for as long as I can remember. By the end of the first week, that was noticeably better. My stomach just felt calmer after meals.

That's because IM8 has a four-phase gut system — digestive enzymes break down the food your body struggles with, prebiotics reshape your gut environment, 10 billion spore-forming probiotics colonize your intestine, and postbiotics seal the gut lining. Most probiotics die in stomach acid. These are spore-formers — they actually survive and get to work.

By week two, my energy evened out. I wasn't crashing at 3pm anymore. I was still sharp at 6pm when I'd normally be reaching for another coffee. That's the CoQ10 at 100 milligrams — it fuels the little engines inside every cell that produce your energy. After 30, your body makes less of it. IM8 puts it back at the clinical dose.

Sleep got deeper too. I was actually waking up feeling rested instead of groggy. There's magnesium bisglycinate in here — the form your body actually absorbs, not the oxide that's 4% absorbed — and saffron at 30 milligrams, which supports the serotonin that converts to melatonin at night.

By week three, someone said to me “you look different” and I couldn't really explain why. I just felt more like myself. Less foggy. More present. That's the full B-vitamin complex in bioactive forms — methylcobalamin B12 instead of the synthetic kind, Quatrefolic folate instead of folic acid that 40% of people can't convert.

By week four, it was just... normal. In the best way. Everything working. Not a rollercoaster. Just steady. In IM8's clinical trial, 95% reported more energy, 85% better digestion, and 80% better sleep. That tracks with what I experienced.

90 ingredients. One scoop. Under $3 a day. 30-day money-back guarantee. Code [YOUR CODE] in my bio.

CONCEPT 3

The Skeptic-to-Believer

Angle: You were skeptical about supplements (or this one specifically). Then you actually looked into it. Here's what changed your mind.

Hook Examples (use these or write your own in the same spirit)

1. "I laughed at supplement culture for years. Then I actually looked into the science behind this one."
2. "I've turned down every supplement deal I've been offered. I said yes to this one. Here's why."
3. "I don't do wellness trends. I don't do greens powders. But this isn't either of those things. Let me explain."
4. "If you've ever scrolled past a creator promoting a supplement and rolled your eyes — same. So here's why I'm doing this exactly once."

Talking Points

Hit these beats in your own words. You don't need all of them — pick the ones that feel natural to you.

- Lead with your skepticism. Your audience needs to hear that you didn't just accept this — you interrogated it. That's what makes it credible.
- What specifically changed your mind? Was it the ingredient forms (bioactive vs. synthetic)? The clinical trial? The advisory team? The fact that Beckham co-founded it? The NSF certification?
- The three strongest credibility points: (1) 90 clinically dosed ingredients in bioactive forms, (2) formulated by world-leading scientists, (3) NSF Certified for Sport — tested for 280+ banned substances.
- If you have a specific "wait, seriously?" ingredient fact, use it. Examples: most magnesium supplements are oxide (4% absorbed). Most B12 is synthetic cyanocobalamin (releases trace cyanide). 40% of people can't convert folic acid due to a gene variant.
- Land on: "I'm not someone who promotes supplements. This one earned it."

Avoid

- Don't bash other creators or brands.
- Don't say "this is the only good supplement." Say it's the one that earned your trust.

Example Script (if you prefer to read)

You can read this as-is or use it as a starting point. Replace [YOUR CODE] with your discount code.

Alright... I'm going to be honest here — I've ignored supplements for years. The marketing is exhausting, most of it is hype, and I've never trusted that what's on the label is actually what's in the bottle.

So when IM8 came across my desk, I did what I always do — I opened the label first. And that's where it got interesting.

90 ingredients, all clinically dosed. Not a proprietary blend hiding the amounts. Every dose printed on the label.

And the forms aren't the cheap ones most brands use. Their B12 is methylcobalamin — the active form your body uses directly. Most supplements use cyanocobalamin, which is synthetic and releases trace cyanide during processing.

Their magnesium is bisglycinate, not oxide, which is 4% absorbed. Their folate is Quatrefolic, because about 40% of people have a gene variant that can't convert standard folic acid.

It's formulated by world-leading scientists. NSF Certified for Sport. And co-founded by David Beckham — used by Giannis and Sabalenka.

I'm not someone who promotes supplements. This one earned it. 30-day money-back guarantee. Code [YOUR CODE] in my bio.

CONCEPT 4

The Radical Transparency

Angle: Most brands hide behind proprietary blends. IM8 shows you every ingredient, every dose. Walk your audience through what's actually in it.

Hook Examples (use these or write your own in the same spirit)

1. "Most brands won't show you this. Here's exactly what's in IM8, why each ingredient is there, and what the research actually says."
2. "I'm going to read three things off the back of this label that your current supplement probably doesn't have. And they matter more than you think."
3. "The difference between a supplement that works and one that doesn't isn't the ingredients — it's the FORMS. Let me show you."
4. "If your supplement uses a proprietary blend, they're hiding the doses. IM8 puts everything on the label. Here's what I found."

Talking Points

Hit these beats in your own words. You don't need all of them — pick the ones that feel natural to you.

- Pick 2–3 ingredients and explain why the form matters. You don't need to cover all 90. The discipline of choosing a few is the angle.
- Strongest examples: Magnesium as bisglycinate (most use oxide — 4% absorbed). B12 as methylcobalamin (most use cyanocobalamin — releases trace cyanide). Folate as Quatrefolic (most use folic acid — 40% of people can't convert it).
- Other strong ingredient beats: CoQ10 at 100mg (clinical dose from a 26-study analysis). Saffron at 30mg (most replicated effective dose across 46 trials). MSM at 1,500mg (clinical dose for joints). Spore-forming probiotics (survive stomach acid — most probiotics don't).
- No proprietary blend. Every dose disclosed on the label.
- NSF Certified for Sport — tested for 280+ banned substances. No heavy metals. No microplastics.

Avoid

- Don't turn it into a chemistry lecture. Lead with the benefit ("sleep" / "energy" / "gut"), THEN name the ingredient and why the form matters.
- Don't read the entire label. Pick 2–3 that surprised you.

Example Script (if you prefer to read)

You can read this as-is or use it as a starting point. Replace [YOUR CODE] with your discount code.

I want to read you three things off the back of this label. Because the difference between a supplement that works and one that doesn't usually comes down to three words you've never looked at.

First one. Magnesium. Most supplements use magnesium oxide. It's the cheapest form and your body absorbs about 4% of it. IM8 uses bisglycinate — which your body actually recognizes and absorbs. If you've been taking magnesium for sleep and felt nothing, this is probably why.

Second. B12. Most supplements use cyanocobalamin — it's synthetic, and when your liver processes it, it releases trace amounts of cyanide. IM8 uses methylcobalamin — the active form your brain uses directly. No conversion needed.

Third. Folate. Most multivitamins use folic acid. But about 40% of people have a gene variant that makes folic acid basically unconvertible. IM8 uses Quatrefolic — the pre-converted form that bypasses that entirely.

Three ingredients out of 90. Every single one at clinical dose. Every dose on the label — no proprietary blend. NSF Certified for Sport.

If you've been spending money on supplements that your body can't even use — this is the fix. 30-day money-back guarantee. Code [YOUR CODE] in my bio.

CONCEPT 5

The Cost-Per-Day Reframe

Angle: People spend $8 on coffee without thinking. IM8 is under $3 a day and replaces up to 16 supplements.

Hook Examples (use these or write your own in the same spirit)

1. "People spend $8 on a coffee every morning without blinking. This is under $3 a day and it's 90 clinically dosed ingredients."
2. "I added up what I was spending on supplements separately. It was over $150 a month. Now it's under $3 a day for everything."
3. "You're not adding a cost. You're replacing one. Here's the math."
4. "The cheapest way to take 90 ingredients is to buy one thing. Here's what I mean."

Talking Points

Hit these beats in your own words. You don't need all of them — pick the ones that feel natural to you.

- Do the math for your audience. If you were buying magnesium, B-complex, probiotics, CoQ10, vitamin D, zinc, and a greens powder separately — that's $100–$200/month easily. IM8 replaces all of it for under $3/day.
- The cost-per-day framing is more powerful than the monthly price. Under $3 a day = less than a coffee.
- Mention the 30-day money-back guarantee — it's risk-free. If it doesn't work, you get your money back.
- The welcome kit comes free with your first order — travel sachets and a signature bottle.
- Don't position it as cheap. Position it as a better allocation of money you're already spending on worse versions of the same ingredients.

Avoid

- Don't apologize for the price or sound defensive.
- Don't say "it's expensive but worth it." Say "it's less than what you're already spending on supplements that aren't working."

Example Script (if you prefer to read)

You can read this as-is or use it as a starting point. Replace [YOUR CODE] with your discount code.

I want to do some quick math with you. Because when I first saw the price of IM8, I thought it was expensive. Then I actually sat down and added up what I was spending on supplements separately.

Magnesium — $15 a month. B-complex — $20. Probiotics — $35. CoQ10 — $25. Vitamin D, zinc, a greens powder — another $40. I was spending over $150 a month. And half of it was in cheap forms my body wasn't even absorbing.

IM8 replaces all of it. 90 clinically dosed ingredients in bioactive forms. Under $3 a day. That's less than my morning coffee. And it's not adding a cost — it's replacing one. With something that actually works better.

Co-founded by David Beckham. Used by Giannis, Sabalenka, and Bearman. NSF Certified for Sport. And you get a free welcome kit with your first order.

Plus there's a 30-day money-back guarantee. So if it doesn't work, you literally lose nothing. Code [YOUR CODE] in my bio.

CONCEPT 6

The Identity & Aspiration

Angle: You're not a professional athlete. But you refuse to let your health fall behind your ambitions. IM8 is the system that keeps up with you.

Hook Examples (use these or write your own in the same spirit)

1. "I'm not a professional athlete. But I refuse to let my health fall behind my ambitions. This is what I take every morning."
2. "I don't have a team of nutritionists. I don't have a personal chef. But I have one scoop that covers everything they would."
3. "You don't have to be Beckham to take what Beckham takes. Here's why I started."
4. "I'm running a career, a family, and a body that needs to keep up with both. One scoop. Every morning. That's my edge."

Talking Points

Hit these beats in your own words. You don't need all of them — pick the ones that feel natural to you.

- This concept is about aspiration — the idea that elite-level nutrition used to require elite-level access. IM8 democratizes that.
- Talk about YOUR life and what you're building. The busier and more demanding your day is, the stronger this concept lands. IM8 is the one thing that doesn't require time, willpower, or expertise.
- Mention who else takes it: co-founded by David Beckham, taken by Giannis Antetokounmpo, Aryna Sabalenka, and Oliver Bearman. IM8 is the official supplement partner of Inter Miami. Same product. Same formula. Available to everyone.
- One scoop. One minute. No thinking. That's the simplicity angle within the aspiration angle.
- Formulated by world-leading scientists. 12-week clinical trial with real results.

Avoid

- Don't make it sound like you need to be a high performer to take IM8. The aspiration is about caring about your health, not about being elite.
- Don't lean too hard on celebrity. Lead with your own story. The names validate it — they don't sell it.

Example Script (if you prefer to read)

You can read this as-is or use it as a starting point. Replace [YOUR CODE] with your discount code.

I'm not a professional athlete. I don't have a team of nutritionists or a personal chef telling me what to eat.

What I do have is a career that doesn't slow down, a family that needs me present, and a body I'd like to still be using well in 30 years.

That's why I started taking IM8. One scoop, one minute, every morning. 90 clinically dosed ingredients — vitamins, minerals, probiotics, amino acids, adaptogens, CoQ10, saffron, digestive enzymes — everything my body needs in one drink.

The same formula co-founded by David Beckham. The same product taken by Giannis Antetokounmpo, Aryna Sabalenka, and Oliver Bearman. The official supplement partner of Inter Miami. Formulated by world-leading scientists.

You don't have to be any of those people to take what they take. That's the point. The same product, the same formula, available to anyone who actually cares about their health enough to do something about it.

Under $3 a day. 30-day money-back guarantee. Free welcome kit with your first order. Code [YOUR CODE] in my bio.

CONCEPT 7

The Social Proof Stack

Angle: The people behind IM8 and the people who use it speak for themselves. Stack the credibility and let the receipts do the talking.

Hook Examples (use these or write your own in the same spirit)

1. "David Beckham doesn't need to sell supplements. He co-founded this one because he takes it. And so do I."
2. "Beckham. Giannis. Sabalenka. Bearman. Inter Miami. World-leading scientists. And now me. Here's why that lineup matters."
3. "I don't trust supplements. I trust the people behind them. Here's who's behind IM8."
4. "Over 700,000 people take this every morning. Here's why I became one of them."

Talking Points

Hit these beats in your own words. You don't need all of them — pick the ones that feel natural to you.

- Stack the proof points. Co-founded by David Beckham. Formulated with world-leading scientists. Used by Giannis Antetokounmpo (NBA champion), Aryna Sabalenka (tennis champion), Oliver Bearman (F1 driver). Official supplement partner of Inter Miami.
- Over 700,000 people take IM8 every morning.
- NSF Certified for Sport — every batch independently tested for 280+ banned substances.
- 12-week clinical trial conducted by the San Francisco Research Institute. 95% reported more energy. 85% reported better digestion. 80% reported better sleep.
- 30-day money-back guarantee. The confidence to offer that says something.
- Land on YOUR reason for trusting it. The names open the door. Your personal experience closes it.

Avoid

- Don't just list names without explaining why they matter. Each name should earn its spot.
- Don't lead with celebrity. Lead with the question ("who built this?" or "who else takes this?") and let the answer be the proof.

Example Script (if you prefer to read)

You can read this as-is or use it as a starting point. Replace [YOUR CODE] with your discount code.

I don't trust supplements. I never have. And I thought I never would. The industry is full of big claims, pretty packaging, and ingredients that don't do what they promise. So when I evaluate something, I don't look at the marketing. I look at who's behind it.

IM8 is co-founded by David Beckham. He takes it every day. It's formulated by world-leading scientists. The athletes using it include Giannis Antetokounmpo — NBA champion, Aryna Sabalenka — tennis champion, and Oliver Bearman — F1 driver. And IM8 recently became the official supplement partner of Inter Miami.

Over 700,000 people take it every morning. It's NSF Certified for Sport — every batch tested for 280 banned substances. And they ran a 12-week clinical trial: 95% reported more energy, 85% better digestion, 80% better sleep.

That's the receipt stack. That's why I trusted it. And after taking it for [X weeks/months], that's why I'm still taking it.

30-day money-back guarantee. If you don't feel a difference, you get every penny back. Code [YOUR CODE] in my bio.